It is a popular Saturday cartoon feature of one of the Calgary dailies. A tiger is introduced into the adventures of two youths in Africa. Don't you believe that tiger yarn. Lions and leopards are found in Africa, but not tigers. The tiger inhabits India and other countries of the far east, but no one has ever found a tiger on the "dark continent." This cartoonist needs a little instruction in zoology.

WEEK MENACE

The Associated Committee on Weed Control of the National Research Council of Canada will meet in Edmonton, January 19. This meeting will bring together government officials from Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and other provinces.

Presumably these men will discuss the increasing weed menace and outline plans for the control of weeds, one of the most serious problems with which the western farmer has to contend.

That the weed menace is on the increase there is no doubt. We have witnessed in Alberta the ravages of the Canada thistle, the sink weed, and the now thistle, not to mention many other weeds, not to mention crop areas. These three weeds are particularly difficult to combat, and have caused hundreds of thousands of dollars loss to the farmers of the Prairie provinces and farmers have spent huge sums of money in fighting weeds, but in spite of every effort the weeds appear to be gaining a firmer foothold.

Weeds show a hardiness and tenacity of life that is amazing. Through long centuries of struggle for existence they have developed wonderful powers of resistance against adverse conditions, and their powers of propagation are almost unlimited.

Proper control of the weed menace can be brought about only by the co-operation of every farmer and land owning corporation doing their best to eradicate these unwanted members of the plant family. A little extra effort now will save time, trouble, and untold loss in the future.

THE WORLD GRAIN SHOW

The World Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held in Regina, next summer promises to be a world show in fact as well as in name.

Entries are being received from Halifax to Honolulu, and from Calico to Calais. Countries in Asia, Europe, North America, South America, and the South Pacific will be represented in the various classes of grains, grasses, and field crops.

Not the least important part of this great world's exhibition is the cultural and agricultural products is the conference program in which there will be lectures and discussions on seed strains, methods of cultivation, fertilization, culture, and every phase of the highly selected business of agriculture.

Our difficulty today seems to be not in growing quality and quantity, but in distributing to the markets of the world the products of our farms. This phase of agriculture is an all important one today. Still, quality and quantity must be maintained with the increasing demands of the world's population, and the coming conference in Regina should contribute and distribute much useful knowledge for the benefit of agriculture in general.

I PROMISE TO PAY

Calgary's stand on the exchange question as between Canadian and American currency has brought both commendation and condemnation. Whether Calgary will eventually be forced to pay the exchange, the stand the city has taken is at least bringing to light a few facts pertaining to currency exchange, our Canadian gold standard, and monetary matters in general.

In one respect the dispute may result to the benefit of the taxpayers, for the difficulty the city council is having with the banks in the matter of financing is causing the council to try to liquidate other means of financing.

The issuance of scrip in place of borrowing from the banks is being thoroughly investigated by a number of Calgary's councillors.

Scrip was first used in Alberta by the towns of Banff and Jasper, according to reports, it was successfully used throughout 1932 and saved the towns about $500 in interest charges. The 1933 scrip issue in Banff was so satisfactory that the council plan to issue a greater amount during 1933. Should Calgary be able to successfully operate on scrip it will save the city a huge sum of money in bank interest.

WORLD GRAIN EXHIBITION ATTRACTS GREAT INTEREST

Twice postponed because of adverse conditions, the World Grain Exhibition and Conference will be held in Regina, Sask., this coming summer, July 24 to August 6.

"Show what you grow and share what you know" is the slogan of the great grain exhibition which is attracting world-wide interest. Entries are being received from many states in the American Union, from Argentina, from Australia, India, and from practically every country in the world.

course the use of scrip is only feasible when merchants and business men agree to accept it as cash. Bassano is in the fortunate position of not having to borrow money which to finance until the new taxes pay some in of the scrip question is of no immediate interest here.

WINNING GRAIN EXCHANGE CLAIMS WORLD CONTINUES

TO BATTLE FOR WHEAT PRICES In reply to a statement by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool that "the established grain trading machinery has broken down and that they, the producers, are the direct sufferers of that collapse," the Winnipeg Grain Exchange in a recently issued pamphlet, says in part:

"The cause for the low prices which prevail for wheat are perfectly well known to the directors of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool. These are the same who are responsible for a depression in wheat prices, more acute than any previously experienced and affecting every industry and activity. The existence of that surplus of wheat, most of which is held in North America, is the chief reason for the low price of wheat. In the accumulation of that surplus the policies pursued by the Wheat Pool, and by the Federal Farm Board in the United States were the prime agencies. The pursuit of these policies by the Pools in place of utilizing the established trading machinery caused the depression of the Dominion Government in an effort to prevent even worse consequences, and has overloaded the markets of the world with the large unabsorbed surplus of wheat so that it has been impossible for prices to be maintained at a satisfactory level."

"A national marketing agency would be powerless to raise the present world wheat price level in face of the surplus now existing and of the efforts of consuming countries, influenced in no small measure by fear of a combination of producers in exporting countries to hold up prices, to produce their own food-stuffs."

"World conditions of trade are at present confused and disturbed. Grain markets in important areas in the world are prevented from functioning normally by numerous and ill-advised experiments. Tariffs, quotas, and milling restrictions have been imposed upon wheat by consuming countries in their own supposed interests. Under the pressure of such influences it is inevitable that the wheat market in Canada, as elsewhere, should be adversely affected. But a national marketing agency could bring no more powerful support to the market than has already been applied by the Dominion Government through the Central Selling Agency in an effort to bring some relief to producers."

"Prices of primary products the world over have fallen as low as wheat and in the case of many of them, fell long before the big decline in wheat prices took place. The established machinery of grain trading cannot be held responsible for a condition which prevails in regard to practically all other products as well as to wheat."

FIGHTING IN SPAIN WITH DEATH TOLL OF 35 PEOPLE

MADRID, Spain, Jan. 5—A battle between Communists and a large force of civil guards was under way tonight at the village of Bugarra in the province of Valencia. All told, the extremist movement against the government, which has affected many parts of Spain, has resulted in the killing of 35 persons and wounding 100 in the past two days.

It is anticipated that there will be some 100 entries from Alberta. The provincial department of agriculture has agreed to pay half the entry fee on approved exhibits from the province. # FIRST IMPRESSION

"Love doesn't last..." It was with those words ringing in her ears that Pauline woke on her wedding morning to find the sunshine pouring in at her window. "Love doesn't last..." It seemed strange that the one thought in her mind on this day of all days should be of those words in Barbara Stark's letter which had arrived last night. Barbara was Pauline's best friend for reasons that both of them would have found difficult to explain. The two girls were as unlike as it is possible to be, for while Pauline was young, unspoiled, and full of the joy of life, with a touching belief in happiness and the theory that love never dies, Barbara, at seven-and-twenty, seemed to have run through more experience and emotions than many a woman double her age. She had been married, had had a baby, which mercifully, as people said, had died soon after birth; she had been divorced, and at the moment was getting herself talked about everywhere by her wild extravagant and because of a new and violent friendship with a married man.

But in spite of all these things Pauline adored her. The chief trouble was that Dennis did not approve of Barbara, and many times during her engagement Pauline's heart had been torn because of her love for her friend and her love for the man she was to marry, and her desire to do as she wished.

Many times she had tried to explain to Dennis her friendship for Barbara, and had always been conscious of failure. "I know people don't like her," she defended Barbara loyally, "but that's only because they don't know her and understand her as I do."

"Her own fault," Dennis broke in gruffly, but this Pauline would not allow. Pauline never really knew whether Barbara liked Dennis or disliked him. She was always charming to him when he would allow her to be, and yet last night, in the letter that accompanied a most beautiful gift, she had said things about marriage which had so impressed Pauline that she woke on her wedding morning with some of the words ringing in her ears.

"I don't expect too much from your husband as I did! Any woman of experience will tell you that love doesn't last. Romance will wear thin. It's traditional that men get tired of the same woman. When you've been married a few years you'll be lucky if you're still good friends. Don't think I am saying these things to hurt you. I'm saying them because I want you to be happy and you can only be happy after you're married by not expecting too much. Let him be quite free, too—don't try to chain him to you all the time—that's a sure way to kill love..."

"Love doesn't last..." Those were the words that haunted her as she sat up in bed, her hair sometimes Pauline was tempted to think he was right. Dear Dennis, who was so good to everyone. Dennis had fallen in love with Pauline at first sight, so he said, and she—well, there had never been another man in the world for her.

"Much better for you if there had been," so Barbara declared. "First love generally comes a crepper for want of experience."

Pauline had laughed at the time, but now the words returned to her with a little sting. She dismissed them determinedly—what did it matter what one embittered outlook prophesied? She knew she would be perfectly happy.

Dennis was quite well off, and he had prospects. He was thirty-two, and he had a motor car in which they were going away for a honeymoon trip; he had bought a house—quite a small one, but a "darling," so Pauline told everyone, and she had been quite sure that they would live happily ever after, until Barbara's letter came last night.

Not that she was really seriously influenced by it—all Barbara's ideas about life were totally different from her own—but it was the first small shadow cast over the sunshine of her happiness.

It was her wedding day! In the next room a white frock and veil lay on the bed, downstairs all the wedding presents were set out on long tables.

She took up Dennis O'Hara's photograph and kissed it. In a few hours now she would be his wife—she would be Mrs. O'Hara. Dennis said he was not Irish in spite of his name. Only yesterday she had almost covered a sheet of newspaper with his name and her own joined shine and the shadows will fall behind you. Now drink your tea and get dressed."

Then, being a sensible mother, she went quickly away, before Pauline saw the tears in her eyes.

Pauline drank her tea, bathed, and dressed. There were a lot of people staying in the house—cousins, and a bachelor uncle, and two children who were to be bridesmaids—the morning seemed to fly till suddenly Pauline's mother said: "It's time you dressed, darling."

Pauline was conscious of a little shock, and for a moment a wild sense of panic took possession of her. It was as if someone had said: "This is the beginning of the end. After today life will be quite different. You will never really belong to yourself any more or be free to do as you like."

With an effort she pulled herself together. What nonsense! When she was marrying a man she loved with her whole heart and was going to a happiness far greater than any she had ever known.

She hummed a snatch of a song as she ran upstairs to her room. She was at the door when someone came up the stairs behind her two at a time, and Peter Johnson—a very favorite cousin, who would have liked to be something nearer and dearer—called her name.

"Pauline!" "Hello, Peterkin."

He joined her rather breathlessly. "This has just come. I thought you'd like to open it." He gave her a small parcel.

"Thank you," Pauline was turning away when he caught her hand. "I'll always be the same, Pauline—always there if you want me. If ever there should be any trouble—"

Again Pauline was conscious of that little shadowy premonition. What trouble could there be? Why did everyone insist that her sunshine was bound to be clouded? (continued next week.)

THE PICTURES

George Arliss, star of five of the talking screen's great pictures, comes to the Orpheum Theatre this week, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, Jan. 12, 13, and 14, in "The Man Who Played God," a Warner Bros. picture adapted from the stage play inspired by Governor Morris' short story of the same title.

Last week's advertisement named this picture to play last week, but this was an error. Last week "Union Depot" was the feature picture, and Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week "The Man Who Played God" will be shown.

"The Man Who Played God" is a story of a musician of international fame, an essentially human being whose life and hapless revolve around his music and the pleasure he brings to countless thousands via the heaven-sent gift he possesses. Fate plays strange tricks on him, giving and taking love, presenting the world for a plaything and then taking everything away. Arliss portrays every step in the drama with nuances and shadings rarely seen on the screen.

If she loved by two women, adored by thousands more. He was in love with one, a widow, played by Violet Heming, before she married another. She loves him but keeps her own counsel because she believes him to be in love with a young and beautiful girl, played by lovely Lettie Davis, a newcomer to the screen whose work has been rewarded with a long term contract.

Ronald Colman is coming in "The Unholy Garden," Thursday, Friday, and Saturday next week.

hair rumpled childishly, her blue eyes blinking in the sunshine. The present Barbara had sent her was standing on a small table by itself. It was a small carved statuette in ivory and silver, of a small Cupid beating his hand in vain against a barred door, and underneath was the one word, "Denied."

It seemed a funny sort of wedding present to send anyone, Pauline thought—even while she realized its beauty, when she had shown it to Dennis, he had laughed.

"She's a miserable cynic," he said. "We'll put it in the spare room, so that she'll be able to look at it as much as she likes when she comes to stay—I suppose she will come?" "Of course she will," Pauline answered quickly, but she had not told him about Barbara's letter. She had burned it.

"Love doesn't last..." Of course, that had been Barbara's own experience. Pauline was not clear as to the facts of her friend's marriage—she had never asked about it—and Barbara never spoke of her husband. That he had made good provision for her was common knowledge; that he was somewhere abroad was a vaguely accepted fact; and that the divorce had actually been nobody's fault but one of those "arranged" affairs was agreed by the charitable. Pauline thought it was all very pathetic. Sometimes the far-away lonely look in Barbara's eyes made her heart ache, and yet Barbara always seemed happy enough. She laughed a great deal, she went everywhere, she dressed beautifully, and yet the strange quality of mother love in Pauline's affection for her told Pauline that in reality she was not a happy woman.

"No heart!" So Dennis summed her. "She isn't as the devil, I know the type well."

together—Pauline O'Hara. There was a tap at the door, and her mother came in.

"I've brought your tea myself this morning, darling. It's a lovely day—so warm and sunny. Did you sleep well?"

"Beautifully." But Pauline's heart gave a little throb of pain as she remembered it was the last time she would sleep here quite as herself. "I hope the sun will shine for you all your life," her mother said as she kissed her. "There is an old saying: 'Keep your face to the sun-

A BAD GAP

There are some gaps which can be crossed if we are willing to take the time and if we have the strength to struggle down one side and up the other. Other gaps must be bridged if they are to be crossed. The engineering skill which was made possible the bridging of such chasms as exist in the Rocky Mountains is one of the marvels of our age.

There are other kinds of gaps which are serious impediments to life's progress. One such gap is the one which exists between knowledge and practice in disease prevention. On the one side is knowledge; on the other, disease and ignorance. The gap must be bridged if disease is to be overcome by knowledge.

Too often it is presumed that knowledge is, in itself, sufficient, but such is not the case. Knowledge is power in that it makes effective practice possible, but it is the application of knowledge which secures results.

Water power has always existed in Niagara Falls, but it was not until recent years that this power has been made use of. Now it is being developed and converted into electric energy, it puts machinery in motion and produces light; it secures results because it is being made use of.

In the field of disease prevention, the greatest and most urgent problem is to put to use the knowledge which is available. We know that typhoid fever can be controlled through safeguarding of water and food supplies, but this knowledge does not cause typhoid fever to disappear. Typhoid fever becomes a rare disease in those countries where this knowledge is applied so that it protects the citizens and safe water supply, and where the food is safeguarded.

The only reason why diphtheria occurs to menace children is because full use is not being made of the knowledge which is available concerning the prevention of this disease. We know how to prevent diphtheria by a simple, safe, procedure—diphtheria immunization. A number of communities have succeeded in banishing diphtheria by making use of this means; others have made no effort in this connection, and so diphtheria continues to ravage.

All this is true for the individual just as it is true for the community. You will only obtain protection from disease and keep yourself in a healthy condition to the extent that you apply the knowledge which you have concerning these matters. Increase your knowledge by full name, but, above all, make use of the knowledge you have.

JAPANESE MAINTAIN PEACE
UNBROKEN BARRIERS FRONT
TOKIO, Jan. 9.—Japanese sources reported today that Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, military leader charged with guarding China's northern border, had indicated willingness to negotiate an armistice between the Chinese and Japanese forces in the vicinity of Shanghai. The Japanese forces captured this Chinese outpost on the yellow sea after a four-day battle in which the casualties numbered thousands.

The Chinese province of Jehol, which lies near Manchuria, is in a state of unrest, and it is the aim of Japanese forces to bring Jehol under control and within Manchurian territory.
